The GoldenLight Café was established in 1946, in the very location it is in today, by Chester "Pop" Ray and his wife, Louise. Pop was born in 1889 and died in 1971. Actually, Pop got sick about a week before The GoldenLight was to open so his son Charles and wife, Edye, opened the doors for the first time. Charles got some plywood, built a few booths and with some hamburger meat and buns grossed $10.48 the first day. Pop was well in a few weeks and ran the cafe until 1957, when he got tired of cooking hamburgers and sold it to Dorothy Gauden. Dorothy ran it until 1979. Then Bill and Pat Alexander bought it and continued to serve those same great burgers. Marc Reed was the fourth owner and in many ways made The GoldenLight what it is today. The chili recipe has changed with each owner; Pop's recipe was lost, Dorothy won't let anyone have hers, Bill and Pat's great taste is hard to cook consistently, and I just can't seem to get Marc's exactly right. As tradition would have it, I now have my own recipe.

The GoldenLight is the oldest restaurant in Amarillo and perhaps the oldest restaurant continuously operating in the same location anywhere on Old Route 66.

Today I have many of the same customers Pop had in 1946. They were here when the doors opened and I can only hope they will never see them close.

I am now the fifth owner of this wonderful bit of history. I can't remember how old I was when I first came to The GoldenLight, it seems like I have just been here all of my life. When I was a little girl, I remember my grandfather taking me to The GoldenLight to get the best burger in the world. In June of 2000, I became a waitress and bartender at The GoldenLight, and I even met my husband here. The GoldenLight is my home. It is a place of good food, cold beer, friendship, family, entertainment (especially at 2:00pm with our regular bunch of old farts, you know who you are!) and love.

I welcome all of you to make yourself at home and remember a little of your past.
